

The Power of Love

Some months after Tavish's littermate passed away, his person asked if Tavish may want another cat companion. Tavish indicated he would like that.

Tavish's person decided to adopt an adult cat rather than a kitten. After sending me a few pictures of available cats, one finally felt like a good match for Tavish. The lovely Feylinn was adopted and brought home. To our surprise, Feylinn was very standoffish to both her new person and Tavish.

Feylinn shared with me that she felt Tavish was beneath her, and she was putting up a defensive wall between herself and her new human. She was refusing to share her affection or to interact with either of them. Tavish was handling this okay, but I felt a little sad about her reaction. When I initially had seen her picture prior to adoption, I felt she would be a wonderful match for both Tavish and his person. Had I got this wrong? I spoke with Feylinn about what was being offered to her again, then told her new person to give it a bit longer.

A few weeks later the email came with these pictures! Feylinn had come to realize just what was being offered to her and decided to step out of resentment and fear to embrace love.

The Power of Love! Happy Valentine's Day!
