

From A Bird's Eye View

I wasn't thinking about how I was presenting my actions, nor did I explain myself prior to taking them. From the grey parrot's perspective if a person held something up within his grasp, it meant some type of food treat was being offered. So why was I surprised when he grabbed my phone with his powerful beak, nearly breaking off a corner of it? I let out a startled yell which in turn led to his reacting by flying to the back of his cage and shaking.

I the "professional" communicator, did not take the time to communicate my intent to take a picture of my handsome bird. Had I done this or even took in account how he would perceive of my actions, the outcome would have been much different.

How often do we assume another will understand our intent or for that matter how often do we assume we understand their intent? How often do we assume another may feel the same way about something as we do?

Every living being interprets intent from her or his perspective. We often forget that our individual life experiences will give us all our own unique perspective on things.

For those of you who wish to learn how to be better communicators with your animals join us for the upcoming online Animal Communication class.
